

Anthropology 400 Honours Seminar and Thesis Research 2021-22

The anthropology department provides a comprehensive research schedule and a lecture series to assist the advanced Honours students in proposal development, ethics review, field-based research, data analysis, thesis writing, research day presentations, defense preparation, and graduate school / grant applications. The monthly lectures are co-taught by all members of the department. The seminar works to build collegiality within and between students and faculty and exposes students to an excellent range of research and professional skills. Students make three public presentations; the first is their proposals at the end of mid-term, a second at student research day Thursday March 30, 2016, and a final defense of their findings where we celebrate their accomplishments in April.
